

Coaching Provider & Coaching Culture

Coaching Provider

In CIPD's Case for Coaching, research showed that external coaches bring a fresh perspective and objectivity to coaching interventions. Our coaching network has a diversity, experience level and breadth of approach and style that will ensure engagement, commitment and results from your people. We can support training programmes by adding on coaching to embed learning; we can help individuals raise their productivity and effectiveness by helping them remove obstacles and barriers within themselves; we can provide an ongoing coaching service that is embedded in the operation of your organisation, all at a cost effective, positive ROI without payroll on costs.

We believe our coaches maintain excellent standards, and we help them in that by offering supervision, regular CPD opportunities and ensuring that they abide by our rigorous Code of Conduct.

Coaching Culture

When an organisation engages the concept of a coaching culture, relationships are improved, conversations are more productive and there is a sense of 'how can we?' rather than 'we can't'.

When every member of an organisation knows they are valued and their thoughts and feelings respected, it frees them to think creatively, to work productively and to contribute in unexpected and effective ways.

Let us help you to transform relationships within your organisation, and set yourself apart from your competitors.